Palgrave European Film and Media Studies is dedicated to historical and contemporary studies of film and media in a European context and to the study of the role of film and media in European societies and cultures. The series invite research done in both humanities and social sciences and invite scholars working with the role of film and other media in relation to the development of a European society, culture and identity. Books in the series can deal with both media content and media genres, with national and transnational aspects of film and media policy, with the sociology of media as institutions and with audiences and reception, and the impact of film and media on everyday life, culture and society. The series encourage books working with European integration or themes cutting across nation states in Europe and books working with Europe in a more global perspective. The series especially invite publications with a comparative, European perspective based on research outside a traditional nation state perspective. In an era of increased European integration and globalization there is a need to move away from the single nation study focus and the single discipline study of Europe.

More information about this series at http://www.palgrave.com/gp/series/14704
Contents

Down These European Mean Streets
Kim Toft Hansen, Steven Peacock, and Sue Turnbull

Part I  Noir Aesthetics

Framing Nordic Noir
Audun Engelstad

The Rise of ‘Bright Noir’
Alberto N. García

Melancholy and Murder
Gunhild Agger and Anne Marit Waade

Locating Sound in UK/US Television Crime Drama
Lucy Fife Donaldson

Seriousness, Ordinariness, and ‘Actual Police Work’
Helen Piper
Contents

Part II  Noir Regionalism and Transnationalism  117

Local, National, Transnational  119
Elke Weissmann

When the Local Goes Global  139
Milly Buonanno

The Rise of Noir in the Sun  157
Concepción Cascajosa Virino

Crime Scene Germany  173
Susanne Eichner

A Crime Drama Between Fidelity and Cultural Specificity  193
Yeşim Kaptan

Part III  Noir Market Value  211

Local Noir and Local Identity  213
Kim Toft Hansen and Jørgen Riber Christensen

The Flemish TV Market  233
Tim Raats

Secret City and Micromarkets  253
Sue Turnbull and Marion McCutcheon

Saga’s Story  269
Annette Hill

Index  285