Abstract: There is a growing interest and belief in the potentials of local community interventions. This paper presents insights from the Sol community Based Program intervention running at the isle of Bornholm. The project aims to create healthier communities by focusing on the families with children and their shopping, eating and exercise habits. Governance structures in the project is based on a partnership between different organizations and includes representatives from civil society, community-based associations, businesses and the public administration, as well as three Danish research institutions. The interventions started in 2011 and run over a four year period with particular impact in the three neighborhoods of Allinge, Hasle and Nexø. The primary target group is families with children aged 3-8 years-old. The presentation give a brief insight of the design and conceptual foundation
