You can use a newspaper story, something memorised, an improvised fiction etc. etc. but use no words! Translate a mood or characteristic action into music your own way, do not bother about realism. Alternate between dramatic and lyrical statements for each thumbnail. Thumbnails are suggestive, they provide a flavour of something, but they remain brief, like when scrolling down in social media on digital devices. Make thumbnails very different.	Change groups ...

Carl Bergström-Nielsen 2016

Practise alternating between "thumbnails", maximum 25 seconds, and pauses, minimum 25 seconds so that you can realise them approximately without looking at the watch. Agree on a duration for playing. Members of group A (half of the total group) play alternately a "thumbnail" (see the suggestions in the footnote above...) - and make a pause. This is done independently of the others. Members of group B comment occasionally, individually. When half of the agreed duration has elapsed, someone gives a sign (for instance, ringing a bell), and members of group A become now group B and vice versa. - If, after practising, you have a very good reason to change the interval of 25 seconds, you may do so.
