Nine theses on the foundation of ethics

Nørreklit, Lennart

Publication date:
2006

Document Version
Publisher's PDF, also known as Version of record

Link to publication from Aalborg University

Citation for published version (APA):

General rights
Copyright and moral rights for the publications made accessible in the public portal are retained by the authors and/or other copyright owners and it is a condition of accessing publications that users recognise and abide by the legal requirements associated with these rights.

? Users may download and print one copy of any publication from the public portal for the purpose of private study or research.
? You may not further distribute the material or use it for any profit-making activity or commercial gain

Take down policy
If you believe that this document breaches copyright please contact us at vbn@aub.aau.dk providing details, and we will remove access to the work immediately and investigate your claim.
Nine theses

on the foundation of ethics

Lennart Nörreklit

Philosophy and science Studies
No. 3, 2006
Nine theses on the foundation of ethics

Lennart Nörreklit

1. Ethics is not based on our feelings, since it may demand us to act against our feelings.

2. Ethics is not based on culture, tradition, habits: Ethos and morals are not ethics. We try and should try to create a morality rooted in our ethics.

3. Ethics is not based on calculation of consequences. On the contrary, calculation of consequences presupposes tradition, ethos, morality without which human behavior generally becomes unpredictable. And: This morality should be rooted in ethics.

4. Ethics is based on reason: The concept of goodness calls for reasons thorough the question: “why?” – “why is it good?” The answer is a reason.

5. The unconditional command of ethics is that we must create and sustain a caring, loving and loveable world, because only love provides the credible reason to live and be in the world.

6. We must create our self-identity by identifying with those people, activities and places, which we love – otherwise we become self-negating and destructive.

7. The reward of being true to our loving approach to life is happiness. It is a condition of happiness. (Not pleasure.)
8. Ethics is founded in the impetus, the inborn tendency of meaning and being togetherness (i.e. of consciousness), which aims at realizing life as a love-project. This means, that it is founded in love, in the ability to sustain and be in a lovable, loving world – it is founded in our reason to live.

9. Thus ethics is founded in the impetus that creates duration and life in the form of value. A value is that which demands an open time horizon. The form of a values synthesizes duration and infinity (change) in identity.