I have references from my University Pedagogical Programme's supervisors: Frederik Lundtofte and Annette Rasmussen. Their summary statement states: "We find that Irina actively reflects on her role as a teacher and accommodates her teaching style based on inputs from various sources, including immediate student reactions, course evaluations, peer feedback, experiences from academics at her own and other institutions as well as the established pedagogical literature. Her performance greatly exceeds the course requirements."

Personal reflections and initiatives: Here you may state any personal deliberations as regards teaching and supervision, any wishes and plans for further pedagogical development, plans for following up on student feedback/evaluations, etc. Personal reflections on your own pedagogical practice, including objectives, methods and implementation. Thoughts on the teaching method at Aalborg University (which is largely based on group-organised project work and problem-based learning)

My teaching philosophy is to integrate research into teaching. I deliver research-based and research-oriented teaching to students to give them the latest updated and original information, and knowledge in the fields of discipline, stimulate their innovative thinking, enhance evidence-based knowledge and encourage their interest in research.

I create learning that is active, collaborative and fosters learning relationships. In class, I build a friendly environment and encourage students' participation, collaboration and questions. After class, I am always happy to provide additional guidance or suggest extra learning material for better academic progression.

I aim to make students' experience and learning environment memorable and interesting while at the same time practically oriented. For this reason, I have created the Finance and Banking Society, a student-run establishment, that helps to connect students interested in the financial services industry and provides them with an opportunity to establish personal and professional networks. The Society serves as a bridge between finance students and the financial services industry and allows students to gain additional skills and knowledge by attending specially organised guest lectures run by invited academics and practitioners.

I am fully engaged in continuing professional development. Being an active researcher, my professional development involves publishing papers, attending conferences and acquiring the skills required to conduct impactful research. To date, I have had 10 refereed articles published in an extensive range of peer-reviewed journals and a further three papers in the submission stage.

I am fully committed to learning and developing throughout my career. For knowledge development and exchange, I regularly attend research seminars and workshops.

I promote equality of opportunity on the grounds of race, gender, culture, age, and disability. I recognize the importance of supporting all students to achieve their full potential in the academic learning environment. As a Lecture/Module Coordinator and a Supervisor I am committed to treating students with fairness, respect, tolerance and understanding, regardless of sex, ethnic origin, religion, disability, age and sexual orientation.
